How doe you Madam, how doe you my good Lady?

Des. Faith halfe asleepe.

Em. Good Madam, what's the matter with my Lord?

Des. With who?

Em. Why with my Lord Madam.

Des. I ha none, doe not talke to me Emillia,
I cannot weepe, nor answer haue I none,
But what should goe by water: prethee to night
Lay on my bed our wedding sheetes, remember,
And call thy husband hither.

Em. Here is a change indeed. Exit.

Des. 'Tis meete I should be vsde so, very well;
How haue I bin behau'd, that he might sticke
The smallest opinion, on my greatest abuse.

Iag. What is your pleasure Madam, Enter Iago.
How ist with you? and Emillia.

Des. I cannot tell: those that doe teach young babes
Doe it with gentle meanes, and easie taskes,
He might ha chid me so, for in good faith,
I am a child at chiding.

Iag. What is the matter Lady?

Em. Alas Iago, my Lord hath so bewhor'd her,
Throwne such despite, and heauy termes vpon her,
As true hearts cannot beare.

Des. Am I that name Iago?

Iag. What name faire Lady?

Des. Such as she sayes my Lord did say I was?

Em. He call'd her whore: A begger in his drinke,
Could not haue layed such tearmes vpon his Callet.

Iag. Why did he so?

Des. I doe not know, I am sure I am none such.

Iag. Doe not weepe, doe not weepe: alas the day.

Em. Has she forsooke so many noble matches,
Her Father, and her Country, all her friends,
To be cald whore? would it not make one weepe?

Des. It is my wretched fortune.

Iag. Beshrew him for it; how comes this tricke vpon him?

Desd.

Des. Nay, heauen doth know.

Em. I will be hang'd, if some eterna
Some busie and insinuating regue,
Some cogging, cousening slaue, to get
Haue not deuisde this slander, I'le be h

Iag. Fie, there is no such man, it is i

Des. If any such there be, heauen p

Em. A halter pardon him, and hell
Why should he call her whore? who k
What place, what time, what for me, w
The Moore's abus'd by some outragio
Some base notorious knaue, some scur
O heauen, that such companions thoud
And put in euery honest hand a whip,
To lash the rascall naked through the
Euen from the East to the West.

Iag. Speake within dores.

Em. O fie vpon him; some such sq
That turnd your wit, the seamy side wi
And made you to suspect me with the

Iag. You are a foole, goe to.

Des. O Good Iago,
VVhat shall I doe to win my Lord aga
Good friend goe to him, for by this lig
I know not how I lost him.

Iag. I pray you be content, 'tis but
The businesse of the State does him of
And he does chide with you.

Des. If t'were no other.

Iag. 'Tis but so, I warrant you;
Harke how these Instruments summo
And the great Messengers of Venice st
Goe in, and weepe not, all things shall
How now Rodorigo?

Rod. I doe not finde that thou deal

Iag. VVhat in the contrary?

Rod. Euery day, thou dofftst me, w

WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE Othello (STC 22305) LONDON, 1622 THE BRITISH LIBRARY (C.34.k.32)